To Irishmen who want the independence of their York. own beloved country, it must be of only secondary consideration whether Cotton is King or not-or what may be, now or hereafter, the value of a negro-or whether the American people will ever reopen the slave trade." To this we reply in very plain terms. "So far as Ireland is concerned "-but Ireland is not concerned. Ireland has nothing to do with the matter. "Irishmen who want the independence of their country " ought to stay there. There is the place to make it independent. When an Irishman comes here, and becomes a citizen. it is the honor and interest and independence of this country he is bound to consider. An Irish-born American citizen indeed, may sympathise with the struggles of his native land, (if it makes any struggle) and may go to ALPACCAS, CLOTHS, CASSIMERES and VESTINGS. aid it too, and violate no duty as an American citizen. But even in the Pros- RUGS, DRUGGETS, &c., &c. pectus of that journal he declared his intention to labor of spending his life in moving a dish of skimmed milk."

And growing old in drawing nothing up. Well, "M. H." knows how the Irish people acted in that war-how those that remained at home, remained stock is disposed of, thus offering unequalled inducements as quiet as beasts of burden; and how those who fought for those desirous of purchasing. at all fought for their enemies, and died as a fool dieth : and how thousands upon thousands here in America their books. If the Irish who live in Ireland, then love English government-it is a matter of taste-let them make much of it. If they still hate it cordially as ever (which we believe) then the more their shame and sin to lie quiet under it. Let "M. H." then understand that the individual he addresses, being now a resident of America, and of a Southern State, and having declared his intention upon oath, of becoming an American citizen, feels that he has a right and duty to interest himself in American affairs, and specially in Southern affairs.— And so long as Ireland stays quiet and contented, he refuses to plague Ireland or to be plagued with Ireland.— If Ireland, indeed, were once up, or preparing to get up, rope and America, than any other diarhetic beverage. the case would be different.

Meeting with great success among them, I now offer it to the American publicf knowing that its truly wonderful medicinal virtues must be acknowledged. It is particularly recommended to those persons whose onstitutions may have been impaired by the continuous use of ardent spirits, or other forms of dissipation. Generally nstantaneous in effect, it finds its way directly to the seat of life, thrilling and quickening every nerve, raising up the
